Introduction

The Microsoft Translator service can be used in web or client applications to perform language translations, and other language-related operations. Microsoft Translator Hub is used for the creation of custom translation systems which can be deployed on Microsoft servers and can then be accessed via the regular Microsoft Translator API.

This document covers the specific differences in how the Microsoft Translator API is utilized with translation systems that have been customized with the Microsoft Translator Hub.

Getting Started with Microsoft Translator API

Please sign up for the Microsoft Translator API on www.microsoft.com/translator/getstarted, and generate a secret key to use in your application accessing the Translator API, and to associate your Hub workspace with a subscription.

Take note of either Key 1 or Key 2 from the Azure portal as shown above. You will need to use this key when you invoke the Microsoft Translator API.

Microsoft Translator Hub Steps

The following steps must be completed before you can use your translation system via the Microsoft Translator API. For detailed instructions on these steps, please see the Microsoft Translator Hub User's Guide.

- 1. Create a Project
- 2. Setup a training for the system
- 3. Complete the training successfully
- 4. Deploy the trained system
- 5. Visit the Test the Translation page to obtain the category ID to use for this deployed project

Differences in Using the Microsoft Translator API with the Microsoft Translator Hub

Microsoft Translator requires that you supply the category parameter for your specific trained translation system, in order for you to use the results of your deployed training system.

The Microsoft Translator API functions without specifying any category ID. In that case a generic, Microsoft-supplied translation system will be used. If, and only if you use the category ID listed in the Test the Translation page, the method will refer to your specifically trained system instead.

Microsoft Translator Hub customers can train and deploy custom translation systems choosing from a list of over 7000+ languages. Not all methods make use of the category ID parameter:

Methods with category parameter	Methods without category parameter
AddTranslation()	BreakSentences()
AddTranslationArray()	Detect()
GetTranslations()	DetectArray()
GetTranslationsArray()	GetAppIdToken()
Translate()	GetLanguageNames()
TranslateArray()*	GetLanguagesforSpeak()
	GetLanguagesforTranslate()
	Speak()

All the methods with a category parameter will use the generic translation system for the given language pair, if no category parameter is specified. If the category parameter is specified, and the category has been defined, it will be used. If an undefined category is specified, the method call will fail.

*NOTE: There could be timeouts with TranslateArray() API when used against systems trained in the Hub. If you get frequent timeout when using the TranslateArray API method, we recommend that you reduce the number of array elements passed in the call and try again.

The methods without a category parameter have no category-specific behavior and can be used freely in conjunction with a customized system. However, the set of languages for the two Speak () methods and the two Detect () methods cannot currently be extended using the Microsoft Translator Hub.

How to Find the Category for a Translation System from Microsoft Translator Hub

- 1. Click Projects tab.
- 2. From the Projects list, select the Project for which the translation system has been deployed and select the translation system with status as "Deployed".
- 3. The Category parameter can be found as shown below.

MT Hub requires that you list the category parameter for your specific translation model for you to see the results from your deployed training system. Below is a code snippet that shows how to use the Category parameter. To see sample code on how to get a JWT token, please visit http://msdn.microsoft.com/en-us/library/hh454950.aspx

string text = "Use pixels to express measurements for padding and margins.";
string from = "en";
string to = "de";
// copy your category string from Test Translation page string category = "9fd236928301e9e9fb2e658b4571f1486bd39636 general";
string uri = "http://api.microsofttranslator.com/v2/Http.svc/Translate?text=" + Sys tem.Web.HttpUtility.UrlEncode(text) + "&from=" + from + "&to=" + to + "&category="
+ category;
string authToken = "Bearer" + " " + jwtToken;
HttpWebRequest httpWebRequest = (HttpWebRequest)WebRequest.Create(uri);
httpWebRequest.Headers.Add("Authorization", authToken); WebResponse response = null;
response = httpWebRequest.GetResponse();
using (Stream stream = response.GetResponseStream())
   System.Runtime.Serialization.DataContractSerializer dcs = new System.Runtime.Se rialization.DataContractSerializer(Type.GetType("System.String")); string translation = (string)dcs.ReadObject(stream); Console.WriteLine("Translation for source text '{0}' from {1} to {2} is", text , "en", "de");
    Console.WriteLine(translation);
}

Translator Language Codes

Microsoft Translator Hub customers have the opportunity to train and deploy custom translation systems choosing from a list of over 7,300 languages.

The "Language code" is to be used in the file name when uploading documents to the Microsoft Translator Hub. For example File1_en.txt refers to English document, File1_de.txt refers to German document.

Here is the list of Language Codes to be used as to or from when calling Translator API.
